

Telecare: The Difference Technology Can Make

This newly launched training programme aims to give participants an understanding of how assistive technology can make a difference to people's lives, giving them more independence, opportunities to access social and economic activities, stay at home and achieve their personal outcomes. The training will demonstrate how technology can support our new way of working under the Social Services and Wellbeing Act.

This training course is aimed at all staff within social services, housing, the independent sector and voluntary organisations.

From attending this half - day training course participants will: -

- Understand the role technology can play in supporting an individual to achieve their outcomes
- Understand the range of technology available and how you can keep up to date with new developments
- Be able to consider technology as part of the assessment and care and support planning process
- Ensure consideration is given to the ethics of technology and the impact it can have on the individual and family
- Be able to purchase 7 pieces of equipment directly, following a full assessment of the individual's needs
